INTRODUCTION LETTER FROM LEADERSHIP

To our community:

I'm proud and deeply grateful to share Fort Vancouver Regional Libraries' next Strategic Plan.

This plan is more than a document, it is a reflection of the values and voices of our communities. It represents what matters most to our community: access, connection, learning, and belonging. Together, we have imagined what the future of our libraries can be and now we have developed a shared path to get there.

On behalf of everyone at FVRLibraries, thank you. To every community member who shared an idea, every staff member who offered insight, and every partner who helped us listen deeply, thank you. Your stories, questions, and hopes have shaped this plan. They remind us that libraries are not only about what we offer but also about what we build together.

Libraries have always been more than buildings or books. They are spaces of welcome and possibility, where everyone can learn, create, and connect. As our communities grow and change, our mission remains steady: to champion equitable access to literacy and lifelong learning for all. This plan strengthens that commitment and guides how we will invest, collaborate, and innovate over the next five years.

Our work ahead centers around four key priorities: operational excellence, community connection and inclusion, library programs and services, and spaces and technology. Each of these areas reflects our dedication to integrity, connection, and lifelong learning. More than half a million people rely on FVRLibraries, and each one plays a role in shaping what comes next.

Together, we will continue to nurture curiosity, expand access, and strengthen community. The future impact of our libraries will be written by all of us, one story, one idea, and one connection at a time.

With gratitude,

Jennifer Giltrop
Executive Director

Strategic Planning Process

FVRLibraries launched its strategic and master facilities planning processes in the spring of 2025. This comprehensive effort set out to define a shared vision for the next five years that reflects community priorities, supports organizational sustainability, and advances the library district’s mission of equitable access to literacy and lifelong learning.

The planning process was guided by a Core Team made up of members of FVRLibraries’ Administrative Team and external planning consultants. Meeting biweekly throughout the early phases, the Core Team shaped the overall approach, coordinated data collection, and ensured that the planning process remained inclusive, transparent, and aligned with FVRLibraries’ values.

Timeline

NCAC: Next Chapter Advisory Committee

A key partner throughout the process was the Next Chapter Advisory Committee (NCAC), a diverse group of community members, staff, trustees, volunteers, and community partners who met regularly to guide each step of community engagement and plan development. Their role was essential in ensuring that the final plan is grounded in community voice and perspective. The NCAC met five times throughout the planning process.

Throughout summer 2025, FVRLibraries invited feedback and ideas through a range of activities, including digital and print surveys, open house-style community conversations, and advisory group discussions. Staff engagement included both surveys and focus groups to ensure that internal perspectives and frontline insights informed the planning process. Community members, key partners, and patrons from Klickitat, Skamania, and Clark counties shared their experiences, values, and aspirations for the future of their libraries.

“Thank you for all that you do for our community! We love having our libraries at the heart of our town and so much a part of our lives. Thank you for holding a space for people to learn, grow, heal, and hope. We love our library!”

– Community Conversation Participant

“It should feel like the library is for you, no matter who you are.”

– Community Conversation Participant

Following the engagement phase, the FVRLibraries Board received updates on community input and, later in the fall, reviewed recommended revisions to the organization’s mission, vision, values, and priorities. This collaborative process helped ensure that the plan reflects both community priorities and organizational direction.

The result is a strategic plan grounded in community voice. Ideas, themes, and priorities gathered through this process directly informed the plan’s vision, values, and priority areas, ensuring that the path forward truly reflects the people FVRLibraries serves.

Design Symbolism

The strategic plan is envisioned as a quilt, with each square representing a distinct insight gathered from our community, stitched together with the lived experience and the expertise of our library staff. These pieces are intentionally threaded, creating patterns that illuminate and reinforce our mission, vision, values, and strategic priorities. Woven into everyday moments throughout the library, this plan will be a source of guidance, supporting our library and community for generations to come.

At FVRLibraries, intellectual freedom means providing diverse materials, protecting the privacy of users, supporting open inquiry and dialogue, and ensuring that people can read, learn, and think for themselves—even when ideas may be controversial or unfamiliar. It affirms that every community member has the freedom to seek knowledge and form their own perspectives.
